"I had contracted for Alexandria, where we trained the last two years," said he. "We were delighted with the place. Fine hotel, dandy climate, excellent grounds. The park was about three miles from town, reached by a spur that branched off the city loop.

"This winter the highway passing the park was closed several months for repark. The spur was not in operation. The colored settlers of the community took full advantage of these facts. When the owners of the park went out to inspect their property recently, they found nothing there but the sod and ground. Every board and chair of the minors.
